The oceans roar. A great battle ensues. How many do I need to win a war? How many do I need to bring a great victory? Is there any whose heart is yielded to me? Yes, indeed. I have a people that are devoted to my righteous cause. Yes, indeed. I have a people who deplores injustice and all forms of wickedness. I have a people that truly loves freedom as I do. What can I do through this army though it be small? Those who hate me, mock me. They laugh at any hint of holiness or uprightness. They plot evil against my creation. The people are too blind to see. Lovers of self, they ingest the lies like a delicacy to their own demise, lambs to the slaughter. Decisions, decisions, decisions. The hearts of man are being tested. Choose whom you will serve. If it is self, then serve self. If it is me then surrender your whole heart to me! Are you too blind to see the traps of evil all around you? Are you too blind to see the chains of evil upon you? Are you too blind to see my hand of rescue extended to you? Lovers of self, lovers of evil, why do you reject my banquet for the crumbs on the floor? Open your eyes while your ability to see remains, before the darkness completely consumers you. Take heart my beautiful chosen ones. You have chosen rightly. Be patient. Trust my timing. In the darkness you shine the brightest. My Purposes will be fulfilled. Your victory is sure.
