That's very John...making up lies so his actions are someone else's fault.

John introduced me to everyone else via Skype. He said you and Peter were estranged. That you and Kristen didn't like each other, and that y'all would only drop over if it were convenient.

He needed the Wedding to be confidential because he said that Brigid was a loose cannon.

You are right.... I should have been smarter.

We're out at dinner right now, so can't talk.

However, let me be perfectly clear...everything that happened with John came out of thin air. We had no idea and never would have suspected anything until Brigid called us and told us they were splitting up. No one in the family ever saw it coming. We were reeling from the sudden onset of religious behavior. It was never there before, nor was there a history of violence with Brigid.

Then, all of a sudden, you show up in Wisconsin with the surprise that you're married. We were never told you existed. We thought it was completely bizarre. We didn't know who you were or why it was so secretive. Big time red flag. In fact, we were stunned.

None of us had anything to tell you...we assumed you and John owed us the explanation as to why you kept us out of the loop, frankly. You were already married. It was your responsibility to check into your boyfriend's past and meet his family and friends before marrying him. Peter and I have nothing to do with this. John doesn't speak to us anymore.

Take care of yourself,

Christine

To answer your question, he did the same FAIRMONT Wedding we did. The only issue is we aren't divorced. Weird.

FYI: Peter received an email from John saying that if we received any more legal documents from you they should be sent to his attorney. It said we shouldn't be receiving them, which I didn't realize, or there could be legal consequences. No idea how he knows you sent them.
